History

The Midwest Professional Nutrient 2006, by custom applicators in Ohio and Indiana and with assistance from several Ohio State University Extension personnel in cooperation with USDA-CSREES Great Lakes Regional Water Quality Program.

Purpose

Animal manure applicators directly support the animal industry. As animal operations become larger, manure applicators must adjust to meet the growing demands of their clients. This association is designed to merge sound business practices with the need for sound environmental practices to meet or exceed existing regulatory requirements.

Who should join?

- Custom Applicators
- Manure Applicators
- Private Consultants dealing with animal manure
- Livestock Producers
- Allied industries and,
- Others who benefit from professional manure nutrient applications

Goals/Objectives

MPNNA strives to promote the common business interests of those engaged in the bio-nutrient application industry.

MPNNA encourages professionalism and accountability in business practices, equipment and application methods, always in an economical and environmentally sound manner.

This professional group provides science based education on responsible nutrient management and promotes research relevant to responsible nutrient management.
